PERSON KILLED BY TRAIN

2 An Amtrak train struck and killed a person who had crossed onto commuter rail tracks in Connecticut on Wednesday, New York's main transit agency reported. Amtrak Train 190, headed to Boston from Washington, D.C., struck the person at around 8:27 a.m. at the Metro North commuter rail station in Stratford, Connecticut, said Aaron Donovan, spokesman for New York's Metropolitan Transportation Authority. The victim, who was not authorized to be on the tracks, was not immediately identified. REUTERS

CHINA WARNS WTO

5 China has served notice to World Trade Organization (WTO) members, including the European Union and United States, that complaints about its cheap exports will need to meet a higher standard starting in December 2016, a Beijing envoy said. Ever since it joined the WTO in 2001, China has frequently attracted complaints that its exports are being "dumped," or sold at unfairly cheap prices, on foreign markets. Under world trade rules, importing countries can slap punitive tariffs on goods suspected of being dumped. REUTERS

The state attorney general is benching DraftKings. GETTY IMAGES

Fantasy sports sites to NY AG: Wanna bet?

DraftKings, FanDuel have five days to make their case to New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman.

CHESTER SORIA
@chestersoria
chester.soria@metro.us

Neither of the two fantasy sports companies targeted by New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman as illegal gambling enterprises will stop operating in the state until after they meet with his team.

"This is the beginning, not the end, of the legal process," said Marc Zwillinger, counsel to FanDuel, to reporters on Wednesday.

"Players can certainly still bet on FanDuel," added Nigel Eccles, the company's chief executive officer.

Along with industry competitor DraftKings, FanDuel received a letter from the state attorney general on Tuesday demanding that they end all operations and accused them of enabling illegal gambling.

The grounds for the accusation lie in that Schneiderman said they offer winnings to their customers not based on skill but rather on chance.

"We are very disappointed that New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman took such hasty action today, particularly since he did not take any time to understand our business or why daily fantasy sports are clearly a game of skill," DraftKings said in a statement Wednesday.

"New York's actions today are an unfortunate example of a state government stifling innovation, technology and entrepreneurship and acting without full and fair consideration of the interests of consumers," the statement added.

Both companies have five days to offer either written arguments or make their case in person, though neither company nor Schneiderman would comment on when the meetings would take place.

Zwillinger told reporters that they looked forward to meeting with the attorney general and were prepared to state their case. He said Schneiderman was inconsistent in targeting the companies but not their customers.

"If the player is not doing anything wrong, then neither is FanDuel," Zwillinger added.

In his announcement about the cease-and-desist letters, Schneiderman said he was resolute in proving both companies are as harmful to consumers as other forms of gambling that are illegal in the state.

"Daily fantasy sports is neither victimless nor harmless, and it is clear that DraftKings and FanDuel are the leaders of a massive, multi-billion-dollar scheme intended to evade the law and fleece sports fans across the country," Schneiderman said in a statement.

BRIEF

Airbnb claims almost $2 billion contribution to NYC economy
Rentals of homes across New York City by Airbnb meant close to $2 billion in annual economic impact for the city, the controversial startup said.

The home-sharing company released numbers Wednesday for its top five performing markets, with New York leading the list at $1.96 billion, edging out London's $1.95 billion. Los Angeles comes at a distant third with $890 million, while Berlin and San Francisco allegedly saw $510 million in impact each.

The numbers come as a result of Airbnb's decision to increase transparency after costly battles around the country about how its business model affects housing stock.

The City Council recently proposed a series of strict reforms, including a penalty increase for violating a 2010 law that bans renting out an apartment for less than 30 days without a tenant in the home during the rental.

The fines would jump to between $10,000 and $50,000 from the current $1,600 to $25,000.

At a council hearing in October, Airbnb critics and supporters held competing press events in front of City Hall.

A city official at the hearing reported that the task force to regulate illegal hotels fielded 681 complaints and issued 1,325 violations since January.

In 2014, New York State Attorney General Eric Schneiderman reported that more than 70 percent of Airbnb's New York City listings were illegal.

At the time, the company did not push back on the statistic, which was based on data given to the A.G. by the company after a court battle.

Police are looking for the public's help in tracking down two additional suspects who allegedly forced their way into a Flushing apartment, stunning and slashing a victim before robbing him last weekend.

The incident happened around 4:17 a.m. on Saturday, Oct. 3 in Flushing. The suspects, one of whom police have identified as 41-year-old Antonio Cordova, forced their way into an Elm Avenue apartment.

Inside, they stunned and slashed the victim, then stole money from a safe and two watches.

Police said the 30-year-old victim's roommates aided the suspects. Cordova has been arrested on charges of robbery and criminal possession of a weapon.

The victim was treated at Flushing Hospital and released.

Anyone with information on the second, unidentified suspect is asked to call Crime Stoppers at 800-577-TIPS.

Or tipsters can submit their tip online at www.nypdcrimestoppers.com or text their tip to 274637 (CRIMES) then enter TIP577.

Cancer patients losing Health Republic insurance to continue treatment

Cancer patients who are losing their state health insurance will have continued coverage at Memorial Sloan Kettering, the city and hospital announced on Wednesday.

The state's largest co-op, Health Republic, is folding at the end of the month, and the 114 cancer patients at Memorial Sloan Kettering will receive continued treatment under the city's MetroPlus

"Today's deal ensures that the most vulnerable of this group continue to receive high-quality treatment," Mayor Bill de Blasio said in a statement. "I thank NYC Health and Hospitals for its leadership and Memorial Sloan Kettering for agreeing to work with MetroPlus."

Health Republic, set up by the Affordable Care Act, has 200,000 customers. The state is investigating the collapse.

NYPD Transit Chief Joseph Fox says he's actually pleased that crime numbers are up, because that means more crimes are being reported.

WENDY JOAN BIDDLECOMBE
Wendy.Biddlecombe@metro.us

It's been a year since the MTA launched an ad campaign targeting sexual harassment on mass transit with public service announcements and a new portal on the website for victims to file complaints.

The increased resources by transit and police have led to an increase in reported sex crimes, which is good news to NYPD Transit Chief Joseph Fox. He said he thinks perpetrators will learn the agency takes incidents seriously.

There have been 325 complaints since the new portal debuted, MTA spokesman Kevin Ortiz told Metro. The transit agency did not previously track sexual complaints independently of the NYPD.

"We take these incidents seriously, which is why we created the portal so that both victims and witnesses can file complaints," Ortiz said.

Fox told Metro the department has a "renewed" strategy in the last year on how to police sexual harassment and crimes in the subway, and personally emails all victims who come forward.

"This type of crime to a great extent is under-reported and there are a number of reasons why women don't report," Fox said. "Sometimes when people are in transit they're in a hurry or they're aggravated, they want the event to be over. We want people to know we care deeply about these crimes.. We all have wives and daughters and mothers. These type of crimes happen in transit and crowded places. Few men know that these happen, but far too many women do."

Fox said reports filed through the MTA portal are forwarded to him. This year, he has received 187 reports, and 57 of those were investigated by transit police. The lower number is due to victims who want to remain anonymous and don't leave information on how to reach them, Fox said. There have been four arrests, and many of the cases are still open.

Out of the 57 complaints, 31 victims included photos that detectives can use for wanted posters, Fox said.

In July, Fox told the MTA board the number of reported sex crimes in the subway was up. The same was true in November, Fox said, adding that he's "happy" with the uptick.

"This tells me more people are aware we take these [crimes] seriously," Fox said.

Through Nov. 11, there have been 642 reported sexual crimes that range from forcible touching to photographing to lewd behavior [one case was a rape], compared to 547 during that same time period in 2014. Of those cases, there have been 350 arrests, which is consis-

subway sex crimes up: NYPD

"These types of crimes happen in transit and crowded places. Few men know that these happen, but far too many women do."

Fox

tent with the 2014 arrest rate, Fox said.

In 2014, there were a total of 620 reported sex crimes and 403 arrests.

In 2013, there were 646 reported crimes, 595 in 2012 and 676 in 2011.

One of the tactics Fox introduced earlier this year is adding more female officers on plainclothes teams patrolling the subway. Fox said the female officers will take a brief impact statement which the district attorney can use to prosecute — so the victim doesn't have to go to the precinct for a lengthy affidavit. People shooting cell phone photos and video help, as has the MTA's audible announcements and officer training with anti-street harassment campaign Hollaback!

"It's hard to talk about improvement. We are more about raising awareness, which means more people are possibly going to come forward,"

"This tells me more people are aware we take these [crimes] seriously."

Fox

said Deb-jani Roy, deputy director of Hollaback!

"We've been training MTA officers, lieutenants, sergeants and higher ranking officials to talk a bit about what they can do to support victims, and not necessarily to rely solely on reporting [the crime] as a solution. They need support and want to know what their options are."

Roy said her organization, which recently launched an app that lets users map street harassment, would like to see a larger-scale PSA and poster campaign targeting sexual assault and harassment on the transit system.

When NYC was New Tech City

Before computing entered its rock star phase in Silicon Valley, there was Silicon City.

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

As a custodian of the past, the New-York Historical Society's Stephen Eddin would like to make one thing very clear about modern technology: Computers didn't start with Steve Jobs.

The dominance of Apple makes it difficult to get out of its shadow, but that's the goal of Silicon City, a new exhibit about the history of computers right here in New York. From the Victorian Internet of the 1880s to IBM's blockbuster 1964 World's Fair exhibit that humanized machines, the digital age was set in motion and nurtured long before Silicon Valley.

"You learn history first and then you innovate, and we hope the show will help in that way," Eddin says.

As for the future, IBM — which produced the first portable computer in 1975 — is back in the spotlight, having moved its corporate headquarters to 51 Astor Place last year and looking to get back at the forefront of the field with its Watson artificial intelligence project. Eddin also points to NYC-based Etsy and the 3-D printing company Shapeways as the new phase of the city's tech future.

Here's a preview of the history of computing, BSJ — Before Steve Jobs.

Step inside a replica of IBM's egg theater. ALL PHOTOS BY EVA KIS

Computing gets personal: The exhibit covers a timeline from the late 1800s to the 1980s, but doesn't begin at the beginning. As essential as technology has become — running our lives, connecting us with friends, even being a friend in lines and on long commutes — computers were business and military machines in the popular imagination until the 1964 New York World's Fair. IBM, by then already a calculating machine monopoly in a way no other company may ever be, built an egg theater as the jewel of its pavilion, where visitors got a 12-minute lesson how computers and the human brain solve problems in similar ways, stoking popular interest in technology.

The eureka moment: The innovation that would allow the computer to eventually emerge was, of all things, the light bulb. Thomas Edison, known as the Wizard of Menlo Park (which was in New Jersey, but even Andy Murray is English when he's winning), developed the switching current that would lead to vacuum tubes in 1904, which were integral in everything from radio to TVs, telephones and digital computers. They were eventually abandoned for the more stable transistor, which also allowed machines to get smaller — think Walkmen and, eventually, the smartphone.

IBM's 1935 graduating class

Before machines could remember: Tech was not always a boys' club, and women's contributions get special attention in Silicon City. Ask to see a computer before 1960, and you were likely to be introduced to a person — chiefly, a woman. Before computers could do more than process data, a legion of women not only turned the levers but served as a sort of living RAM. In 1935, IBM's first class of system service professionals was rows and rows of women. In 1954, Grace Hopper invented a programming language that remains in use today.

Wind and snow sweep US Plains, Lake Michigan faces 20-foot waves

Warnings throughout the region said swirling snow and whiteout conditions would make driving "extremely dangerous."

A weather system packing high winds and snow moved through the U.S. High Plains on Wednesday, bringing with it tornadoes and warnings of whiteouts and dangerous road conditions.

The National Weather Service issued blizzard warnings for eastern Colorado, northwestern Kansas and southwestern Nebraska ahead of the system, which it expected to bring gusts of 55 miles per hour (88 km per hour) and dump at least 5 inches (8 cm) of snow in some areas.

"The main issue is the traffic," said Brian Warren, a National Weather Service meteorologist in Kansas. "You do not want to be out there."

The winter weather is arriving earlier than expected this year, he said.

The service predicted 20-foot waves on Lake Michigan and warned of possible flooding near waterways as the system moves through the Midwest on Thursday and Friday.

Tornadoes have been reported on the ground in the southern part of Iowa as the storm system moves east. Property damage was reported in Marion County, southeast of Des Moines, including the towns of Knoxville and Columbia, said John Benson, spokesman for the Iowa Department of Homeland Security and Emergency Management.

"They're out there assessing the damage right now," Benson said. He did not know if there were any injuries.

Forecasters expect the system to move out of the Plains by Wednesday evening and into the Midwest, where high wind warnings and advisories are in effect into Thursday.

High waves could cause commercial freight operators on Lake Michigan to halt or delay shipments on Thursday and Friday, according to Ricky Castro, meteorologist for the National Weather Service.

"This is probably going to shut down a lot of the traffic on the lake," he said.

Lake Michigan is notorious for gale-force winds in November that churn up the lake and create extremely hazardous conditions for ships. REUTERS

Suspect in shooting of Texas judge held on separate charge

A man seen by police as a person of interest in the shooting of a Texas judge in Austin last week was ordered on Wednesday by a judge in Houston to be held without bond on a separate murder charge in that city.

Chimene Onyeri, 28, charged with felony murder in the shooting death of Jacobi Demon Alexander last May, was booked into jail after the appearance in Houston. Prosecutors said he shot the victim four times.

Austin police have not yet announced a motive in the shooting of District Judge Julie Kocurek, 51, in front of her Austin home last Friday, or any link to Onyeri. They said they consider him a suspect.

The Austin American-Statesman reported that Onyeri has a motion in Kocurek's court that would revoke the conditions of a previous plea deal for a fraud conviction and send him to prison.

"Investigators believe that the assault was an attempt to murder her, an attempt on her life," Austin Police Chief Art Acevedo told a news conference. REUTERS

Shoulder Arthritis Treatments Keeping Boomers Active Into Their 60's, 70's Even 80's?

If you suffer with painful shoulder arthritis — science may have finally found the answer you've been looking for.

Here is why: Researchers have discovered a natural gel like medicine that is like "joint oil." This all-natural gel is one of the naturally occurring lubricating substances in your shoulder joint that cushions and lubricates the joint which dries out over time due to wear-and-tear, age or injury. But when doctors precisely place this lubricating gel into your shoulder joint by using advanced digital imaging technology — it is like putting oil on a rusty door hinge. It lubricates the joint and can decrease pain and stiffness. For some, results can be dramatic and last for months. Years for some. Often times shoulder surgery can be avoided.

Know this: This is NOT a supplement you can buy over the counter or on the internet. This is a REAL medical treatment that must be given by a trained health care professional.

And the great news is: There is a free report and information kit available that tells you everything you need to know about this treatment. It also tells you all about cutting-edge medical clinics right here in New York City that are offering this cutting-edge treatment with tremendous success.

To get your information kit or to schedule a No-Obligation Risk Free Shoulder Screening simply call 800-627-PAIN (7246).

Yale students plan forum on university race-related issues

Yale University President Peter Salovey said he wants to take action to end racial tensions at the school.

Students at Yale University on Wednesday planned a campus forum on race and diversity issues at the elite Ivy League school, amid a wave of demonstrations at U.S. colleges over the treatment of minority students.

The forum, set to be held at the school's African American Cultural Center, comes two days after about 1,000 students briefly shut traffic around the university in a rally to protest an alleged Halloween incident in which a fraternity turned away black guests from a party.

It also follows Monday's resignation by University of Missouri President Tim Wolfe amid student complaints that the school did not take allegations of racial abuse on campus seriously.

Small-scale protests and walkouts in sympathy with the Missouri students have also taken place at universities across the United States this week.

The protests build on the "Black Lives Matter" movement, which was involved in massive and sometimes violent demonstrations in cities including Ferguson, Missouri, and Baltimore over police killings of black men. This week's university protests have largely been peaceful affairs, though police in Missouri on Wednesday arrested a white man suspected of making threats online to shoot black people at the school.

"We want to keep the discussion going to-night and give students a chance to express their feelings," said Nicole Tinson, a black graduate student at Yale who is helping arrange the Wednesday forum. REUTERS

Death toll rises to nine dead in Ohio jet crash

The NTSB is heading the investigation, FAA spokesman Tony Molinaro said.

Nine people died in a fiery business jet crash in Ohio, state officials confirmed on Wednesday, as an investigation into the reasons for the jet's crash continued.

Officials from the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board as well as Akron police were at the site where the 10-passenger Hawker business jet struck an apartment building on Tuesday while approaching the Akron Fulton airport.

The flight manifest showed seven passengers, a pilot and a co-pilot were on board at the time of the crash and their families have been notified, said Ohio State Patrol spokesman Bill Haymaker.

The jet's wing clipped electrical power lines and crashed through the four-unit apartment block, eventually stopping on an embankment, Akron Fire Inspector Sierjie Lash said. Nobody was in the building when it was engulfed in flames, Lash added.

Haymaker described the area affected by the crash as "relatively small" and said the debris was somewhat contained by an embankment the jet hit after crashing through an apartment building.

Real estate firm Pebb Enterprises of Boca Raton, Florida, said seven of its employees died in the crash. REUTERS

Debate performances lift Cruz, Rubio to top of social media

One of the most tweeted Cruz moments involved his comments about taxes and the IRS: "Washington is fundamentally corrupt. There are more words in the IRS code than there are in the Bible. And not a one of them is as good."

U.S. Republican presidential candidate Ted Cruz stole the spotlight on social media from the front-runners during a televised GOP debate on Tuesday night, drawing attention and getting positive reviews.

The U.S. senator from Texas, considered a mid-tier candidate in terms of his standing in opinion polls, had the highest social media sentiment analysis score of 11 — and the highest number of mentions on Twitter during the debate, according to Thomson Reuters data.

He topped Republican front-runners Donald Trump, who scored 3.3, fourth in the social media rankings, and Ben Carson, who scored negative 6.7 and came in fifth, for the first time since the 2016 presidential campaign season kicked off this year. A score above 0 means there are more positive mentions on Twitter about a candidate than negative ones.

Cruz also went into the debate with the most positive social media sentiment score among the eight candidates who took the stage in Milwaukee for the debate televised on the Fox Business Network.

U.S. Senator Marco Rubio of Florida, another mid-tier candidate, also rose to the top ranks on social media with a score of 6.5, third in the rankings, according to a Thomson Reuters social media sentiment analysis tool. The tool tracks and aggregates social media mentions of candidates to generate a score based on the ratio of positive versus negative mentions.

U.S. Senator Rand Paul of Kentucky stole the spotlight in the last hour of the debate when he corrected Trump, pointing out that China is not part of the Trans-Pacific Partnership trade pact. Paul's social media sentiment score jumped from negative to positive, giving him an end score of 8.1, just behind Cruz.

Carson, however, had the most-liked social media post of all candidates: an image of himself and his granddaughter having "pre-debate time" that got more than 171,300 likes on Facebook, according to technology data company Engagement Labs.

Record number of young women living with relatives

A record portion of young U.S. women are living with parents or other relatives, largely because of higher college attendance and delayed marriage, a research report said on Wednesday.

The Pew Research Center analysis of U.S. Census Bureau data showed that 36.4 percent of women ages 18 to 34 lived with family in 2014, mostly in the home of a mother, father or both.

The number tops the record set in 1940, when 36.2 percent of young women lived with relatives, the analysis said. 1940 is the earliest year for comparable data.

Among young men, 42.8 percent were living with relatives last year, below the 1940 high of 47.5 percent.

"The result is a striking U-shaped curve for young women — and young men — indicating a return to the past, statistically speaking," Pew said.

Young women are more likely now to be enrolled in college than in previous decades, with 27 percent of them college students last year, the report said.

45%

LAST YEAR, 45 PERCENT OF YOUNG FEMALES IN COLLEGE, INCLUDING THOSE ENROLLED PART-TIME AND AT COMMUNITY COLLEGE, LIVED WITH FAMILY. AMONG THOSE NOT IN COLLEGE, A THIRD LIVED WITH FAMILY.

That compares with 5 percent in 1960.

Many young women are putting off marriage compared with those in previous decades, making staying at home more likely, the report said. In 2013, 30 percent of young women were married, compared with 62 percent in 1940.

The share of young women living with parents or other relatives bottomed at 20 percent in 1960. The upturn increased sharply after 2000 and has not reversed despite a labor market recovery after the Great Recession of 2007-2009, the report said. REUTERS

McCain calls on Pentagon to clarify South China Sea patrol

The chairman of the influential U.S. Senate Armed Services committee has called on the Pentagon to clarify the legal intent of a U.S. patrol last month within 12 nautical miles of an island China has built in the South China Sea.

U.S. officials said last week that the U.S. Navy avoided military drills that could have further inflamed tensions with Beijing during the Oct. 27 patrol by the destroyer USS Lassen in the Spratly islands, an approach experts said could reinforce rather than challenge China's sovereignty claims.

Senator John McCain, the Republican head of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said in a Nov. 9 letter to U.S. Defense Secretary Ash Carter it was vital there should be no misunderstanding about U.S. objectives.

"I believe it is critical that the Department of Defense publicly clarify ... the legal intent behind this operation and any future operations of a similar nature," McCain wrote in the letter seen Wednesday by Reuters.

Washington argues that islands China has built up in the South China Sea are not entitled to a territorial limit under international law, since they used to be underwater at high tide.

China reacted angrily to the patrol near Subi Reef, which followed months of U.S. preparation, despite its lack of military drills.

But analysts said that if the Lassen failed to conduct military drills, the operation would have resembled what is known as "innocent passage," and could have reinforced China's claim to a territorial limit around the reef. REUTERS

Gwyneth Paltrow won't shut up about 'conscious uncoupling'

Man, Gwyneth Paltrow is just priming herself for a career as a celebrity breakup coach. In fact, she's pretty sure that if anyone deserves the whole "broke the Internet" title, it's her and ex-husband Chris Martin. "When I was announcing my husband and I were separating and we were trying to follow this specific way of doing it — and the philosophy is conscious uncoupling — and we, like, broke the f—king internet," Paltrow said during a Goop-sponsored Q&A hosted by Fast Company this week. "It's such a hard time personally and then you have this added layer of all this criticism. Then when you look back you go, 'Well, this is actually kind of a good thing to talk back, introducing in some way.' Like, what if you could break up in a way where you remain a family even though you're not a couple?" Good job, but just don't pull anything patting yourself on the back there.

Gwen Stefani confirms her new album is a breakup album because duh

Well, this is certainly a big change from two weeks ago when Gwen Stefani was all cagey about whether or not her new single, "Used to Love You," is about Gavin Rossdale — the man she's currently divorcing. In her latest radio interview, with San Diego's 93.3, Stefani lets loose that her entire new album, due out next year, is a breakup album. Which is great because as "Tragic Kingdom" proved some (gulp) 20 years ago, that's what she does best. "I would consider it a breakup record," she says. "My cross to bear was to go through these heartbreaks and write songs and help people. My truth is 'Used to Love You.' That's the song. That's what I said, and I feel really fine about sharing that, and I feel honored to share it." See? She's a giver.

Johnny Depp almost got fired off 'Pirates'

Apparently Johnny Depp almost lost the role in "Pirates of the Caribbean" that turned him into an island-owning mega-star. "They wanted to fire me. I fully expected to be fired and I got a call from the upper echelon at Disney who were courageous enough to ask me, 'What the f— are you doing?'" Depp tells Moviefone. "The questions came up, 'Is [the performance] drunk? Is it gay?' All I could say was, because they set me up with a great line, I said, 'Well, don't you know all my characters are gay?' I really expected to be fired, but I wasn't for some reason. They were actually going to put subtitles under my character. They couldn't understand Captain Jack." Listen, while it's great that they didn't dump him from that first "Pirates" film, considering the idea for the sequels wouldn't have been so bad.

Moving up the 'Blacklist'

Brooklyn's Mozhan Marnò loves the spotlight, unless she's at the laundromat.

NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.us

Brooklyn-based actress Mozhan Marnò has been enjoying her second season as Samar Navabi, a Mossad agent from Iran going toe-to-toe with James Spader on "The Blacklist." And this week audiences learn a lot more about her story. We learned something, too: Don't bug her while she's doing laundry.

Marnò RYAN PFLUGER

We learn a lot about your character tonight. You will definitely find out more about Samar's past. Maybe some insight into how she became part of the Mossad, and also you'll meet some people from her past.

What has the vibe like on set?

You know, we do pretty well. (Laughs) It's funny because depending on the story line and the episode, you end up spending more time with certain people.

This year I have spent an inordinate amount of time with a certain red-head, and you know we have a good time. But the story line dictates who you end up spending time with. And this past episode it was just me and James.

Marnò stars as Mossad agent Samar Navabi on "The Blacklist," airing Thursdays at 9 p.m. on NBC. DAVID GIESBRECHT/NBC

That's not a bad way to work.

Not at all. (Laughs.) He's extremely fun and he was in rare form. He's very funny.

Everyone says the more dramatic the show is, the goofier everyone is when the cameras aren't rolling.

Oh, for sure. I mean, there's a lot of dudes (laughs). They run the gamut from macho to goofy to neurotic. There's every color of guy in this ensemble of dudes, and they're pretty lovely. I like being the woman. There's me and Megan [Boone], basically. I think we're the only female series regulars, actually. But whatever, I love attention, so what can I say?

Bonus question

Do you get recognized more for this or for "House of Cards"?

Now that I'm in the second season of "Blacklist," it's like an even split. Last year when I had just been introduced and I was still sort of a new character on "The Blacklist," it was more "House of Cards," for sure. It also depends where I am in the country. If it's in New York and L.A., it's a lot of "House of Cards." But recently it's been both. It's great to have your work out there and appreciated, and then sometimes it's like, I'm going to the laundromat and it's annoying. (Laughs) You look at them and they're looking at you and they're like, "What are you doing here? You're on TV, why are you at the laundromat?" We're all in the same boat here, buddy. It's Brooklyn.

Aaron Eckhart wants to be nice

In "My All American," out Friday, Aaron Eckhart plays legendary University of Texas Austin head football coach Darrell Royal. VAN REDIN, CLARIUS ENTERTAINMENT

The actor says he made "My All American" in part so his mom could watch it.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Aaron Eckhart remembers watching his "Any Given Sunday" co-star Al Pacino film his big locker room speech in Oliver Stone's football saga. He had to watch it many times over many takes. "He just got better and better," he recalls.

More than 15 years later, Eckhart himself is playing a head coach in "My All American." He portrays University of Texas at Austin legend Darrell Royal.

But the film, Eckhart points out, is not about Royal. It's about Freddie Steinmark (Finn Wittrock), a star athlete who, halfway through his college football stint, contracted bone cancer and died.

Playing a coach must be a challenge. Doubly so if you're playing a legend.

I got to Austin. I was eating in a nice steakhouse. I put the first bit of steak in my mouth and I looked up, and there's an oil painting of Coach Royal right over my head. I was like, "Are you kidding me? An oil painting? Maybe a picture of him, but an oil painting? This

This is a very nice film. Some of your films aren't.

The reason I wanted to do this movie is because it's a family movie. How many movies do we go to where you say, "Oh my God, I can't believe I'm watching this with my mom." It feel as I guy means something." I was talking to everyone I could, and I kept getting that look of like, "Dude, you ain't half the man he is. You don't have a prayer." [Laughs]

Texas is tough, as is Texas football.

Texas football is tough. The South is tough. I did a movie in Baton Rouge, and I basically lived on LSU campus. You'd go to a coffee shop and there were soccer moms debating over whether they should replace the quarterback or not. These people are invested in it. So I was a little bit nervous. You've got the accent, get older I want to be involved in good storytelling and family movies, where the whole family can go see it. They want to go to your premieres, man. I went to school at Brigham Young, so they can't show any of my movies. This one they could probably show.

GETTY IMAGES

Being evil

you've got the mannerisms and you've got the former players either approving or disapproving of your interpretation.

Luckily the movie's not entirely about Darrell Royal.

The movie's about Freddie Steinmark. It's about what happened in the '60s and the advances in medical care then versus what they have today — how a kid could get bone cancer and play through it. These guys were playing through pain; that was the edict. You were on the field unless your leg was broken. It's different today, with the concussion protocol. There's more attention paid to that. In those days there weren't any. How many times do you hear about players who lie to their coaches, lie to the medical staff, because they want to stay in the game? A doctor can only do so much. Today they demand that you get off the field. In those days if the guy said, "I'm good, coach," they were like, "OK." It was part of proving yourself as a man. It was macho. What could be more macho than football? But Freddie had a real problem.

Rachael Yamagata, happy and healed

See what happens when the queen of heartbreak moves on.

EMILY LAURENCE
@Emlaurence
emily.laurence@metro.us

Rachael Yamagata's 2004 album "Happenstance" was the 38-year-old's big break, with songs from the album landing on "The O.C." and "Grey's Anatomy," shows known for turning under-the-radar tunes into hits.

But for better or for worse, the album — full of teary tracks — earned her a rep as an expert on heartbreak. Now, Yamagata is mixing things up with a new album in the works featuring songs with a different tune.

"The songs on the new album are more based around someone's personal journey of finding their passion, following their dream and keeping their spirits up," she says.

Questioning her career

Even as a seasoned musician, Yamagata finds herself debating if she should stick with her career choice. "It's a constant revolving door of complete confidence and then total insecurity."

Rachael Yamagata in concert

Rachael Yamagata is also working on an acoustic version of her 2004 album "Happenstance." LAURA CROSTA

More than perhaps any of her other albums, the new album — out next year — is about soul searching. "The inspiration I had when writing the record was of a tightrope walker that really has to be in balance and experiencing these great highs and lows, the entire time taking a risk going through it," she says.

Celebrating the past

Yamagata is touring the country testing her new songs on audiences, but she's also revisiting some of the old favorites that launched her career. In fact, she just wrapped up a special tour celebrating the 10-year anniversary of "Happenstance," and she recorded an all-acoustic album of the songs.

"I didn't go back emotionally and feel how heartbroken I was," she says. "It was a fun nostalgia."

Positive vibes

She says that in the past, it had been much easier to write about heartbreak than happier times. Writing had been a channel for articulating painful emotions, helping her diagnose the problem and move on. But now, she relishes writing about the sunnier side of life.

"The positivity of the new songs came very natural to me," she says. "And if it didn't, it would have been another heart-break album."

Check off your gift list with local, handmade goods while indulging in delicious wintry treats at these holiday markets. EVA KIS

Get festive

For sheer escapism, you can't get farther away from the gray and noise of the city than the Bank of America Winter Village at Bryant Park. Browse a winter wonderland of over 120 glass-walled booths for gifts like cozy Himalayan slippers from Nepal and antique maps, then snack on unique treats like Hungarian chimney cakes (think a sweet pull-apart pretzel rolled in various toppings) and a bar dedicated to chocolate treats. Bonus: Celsius, the restaurant overlooking the massive ice rink at the center of the village, serves boozy cocktails like the Winter Berry Moscow Mule made with Stoli Strasberi vodka. Through Jan. 3, skating through March 6, between 40th and 42nd sts. & Fifth and Sixth aves.

Locavore treasure hunt

Have yourself an artisanal Christmas and score a one-of-a-kind gift at these holiday pop-ups featuring artists from right here in the five boroughs. Find your new trendsetting accessory at Handmade Cavalcade (Dec. 5-6) in Chelsea Market, featuring 50 of Etsy NY's best crafters (arrive early for a free goodie bag). Bust magazine packs in over 200 vendors for its annual Craftacular (Dec. 19-20) at the Brooklyn Expo Center, selling vintage and handmade items galore plus festive eats. If jewelry is really what's on your list, hit up Crafts at the Cathedral (Dec. 4-6, $6 admission, 1047 Amsterdam Ave.), a juried fair of experienced artisans. Opulence is the order of the night.

Browse Santa's workshop

Smorgasburg and the Brooklyn Flea have headed indoors for the winter to ride out the (eventual) snow, setting up shop on the second floor of Sunset Park's Industry City. Watch the craftsmen downstairs create sculptures, books, baked goods and more in their workspaces, then head upstairs to Winter Flea + Smorgasburg to experience the controlled chaos of hipster enthusiasm you know and love. Pick up a bar of Apotheke's new collaboration soap with Brooklyn Brewery, or honey whiskey cakes (which can be packaged to ship, if you feel like sharing) by Brooklyn Baking Barons. Weekends through March 30, 80 N. Fifth St.

A new reason to celebrate

Pop-up masters UrbanSpace know how to make you feel a world away as you wander among their festive red-striped booths wrapped in holly. Look for the Artisan Pledge stickers to find vetted vendors selling U.S.-made organic, fair trade, recycled and handmade goods (all the buzzwords!) In addition to running the Union Square Holiday Market (Nov. 19-Dec. 24), the city's biggest with over 150 vendors and a new craft station for kids; and Columbus Circle Holiday Market (Dec. 1-24), where you can continue the holiday magic with a stroll through Central Park, cider in hand; UrbanSpace has a new Garment District Holiday Market (Nov. 16-Dec. 24) on Broadway between 39th and 41st sts.

PARTY

"Look Book" launch party

Nov. 15, 7-10 p.m.
42West, 514 W. 42nd St.
Free, LarryKrone.com
Party this weekend with artists, authors and fashionistas at the launch event for costume designer Larry Krone's "Look Book." Not your typical fashion icon, Krone's gowns and costumes require a touch of poor taste (his words), so don't expect a sea of little black dresses. There's no cover, but there will be drink specials and music by DJ Bad Ass Laughs, DJ Kris Pissedofferson and a performance by GOLD.

There are 104 features crammed into the eight days of the sixth-ever DOCNYC, and that's not even counting the shorts. There's no unifying theme — just lots and lots of nonfiction work, showing off the diversity of a genre that's impossible to narrow down.

Of course, many of the docs highlight social ills or groups ignored by society. A good chunk of those concern New York City itself. "Missing Ingredient" portrays two longtime eateries struggling to last in a changing, increasingly expensive metropolis. The ever-widening income gap is underlined in "Class Divide." Both of those are grim reminders of our wintry economic times, but "An Autobiography of Michelle Maren" singles out a middle-aged woman living on disability and still trying to overcome an abusive past. Variety is the key here, from music (Barbara Kopple's opening night film "Miss Sharon Jones!"); "Blur: New World Towers") to a look at an ex-North Korean satirical pop artist ("I Am Sun Mu") to a study of PTSD ("Thank You for Your Service"). MATT PRICE

NBA

Knicks continue to look solid

The Knicks are entering an unusual state these days, as they're actually giving their hardened fan-base hope.

That's what happens when you've floundered in obscurity lately, missed the playoffs the last two seasons and whiffed on every major free agent over the summer. But a funny thing has happened since the faithful vociferously booed their top pick, Kristaps Porzingis, on draft night — as the Knicks don't seem as bad as the pundits originally thought, and Porzingis has all the makings of being the biggest steal in the franchise's recent memory.

Yes, he was selected with the No. 4 pick — a lofty status that usually means a rookie is ready to contribute right away. But the Latvian was thought to be years away from fully developing. Yet, here he is — averaging a respectable 12 points, eight rebounds, one block, and one steal per game and providing highlight-reel putback dunks on a nightly basis.

Not even team president Phil Jackson thought the rookie would be this NBA-ready, as he famously lumped Porzingis in with Shawn Bradley earlier in the summer. But Porzingis continues to ascend, much like his team.

Jackson and Fisher have built this team in the mold of their head coach: disciplined, hard-nosed, and not flashy. They won't ever resemble the rough-and-tumble Knicks of Ewing, Oakley and Mason lore, but these Knicks are grinding out wins and doing so with very little fanfare — save for Porzingis' putbacks.

It's almost as if a different hero rises during each victory. Whether it's the brilliance of Carmelo Anthony, the youthful exuberance of Porzingis, or an unsung guy like Cleaunthony Early, Langston Galloway, or Lance Thomas, New York is slowly finding a way to be relevant in the standings again. It was Thomas's turn, Monday night, as he played almost all of Porzingis' minutes in the fourth quarter. Thomas capitalized on Fisher's faith and notched 17 points, knocked down four crucial free throws in the waning seconds and added three 3s. TONY WILLIAMS

3 Things to watch for as Jets host Buffalo, Rex

The Jets will seek a win against familiar faces Thursday night vs. Buffalo.

KRISTIAN DYER
@KristianRDyer
sports@metro.us

Heave ho, one in a row.

The New York Jets won on Sunday, ending a two-game skid where they struggled mightily on defense. Their win over the Jacksonville Jaguars had flaws, lots of them, but it was a victory that was very much needed.

Now at 5-3, they look like a playoff team again. Panic be gone.

And now, Thursday against the Buffalo Bills (8:25 p.m., NFL Network) and their head coach Rex Ryan, the Jets can take a nice step forward toward the postseason.

A win against a divisional rival also in the playoff mix would be huge at this juncture of the season, helping them and hurting their opponent. And a sixth win in their first nine games would put them in a nice spot for their first winning season since 2010 ... when, ironically, Ryan was their head coach. Oh the intrigue.

Three things to watch from the Jets in Week 10:

Has former Jets head coach Rex Ryan completely lost touch? Read at metro.us.

Defensive watch

Shockingly so, it is the Jets' offense that appears further ahead of the defense at this point of the season with the secondary in shambles. Cornerback Antonio Cromartie likely won't play, perhaps a blessing in disguise given his terrible performances the past two weeks. There's also the beaten and bruised Buster Skrine, who hasn't had a very good month. Look for Marcus Williams to get the start outside for the Jets to spell Cromartie. After last Sunday's two-interception performance, he should have plenty of confidence going up against some talented Bills receivers.

The Jets' secondary has been an undeniable strength all season long. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

The return of Rex

As if it hasn't been dissected a hundred different ways by now, this will be the return of Rex Ryan to MetLife Stadium, going up against his old Jets team. For the past six years, the Jets lived and breathed every word from Ryan, who shed tears in front of his team and passionately defended them. Now, he's taking shots at the team that gave him a head coaching job when no one else would take a risk on him. "Jets Nation" has noticed and the atmosphere should be electric. This should feel like a playoff game.

Finding a ground game

The Jets have had major issues running the ball over the past three games as an injured Chris Ivory has yet to get going in recent weeks. Last week's 26 yards on 23 carries was the second straight game where he has averaged 1.1 yards per carry. It won't be easy to get going as the Bills are fifth in the league in run defense, a clear-cut strength of their unit. This is not the best defense, at least on paper, for Ivory to snap out of his rough spell. Perhaps the return of Bilal Powell will help the Jets get running the ball again.

The running game has been putrid of late, but will be integral Thursday to keep New York from becoming one-dimensional offensively.

FANTASY PLAYOFFS CLOSING IN FAST

The playoffs are coming, the playoffs are coming! As we get set for Week 10, we need to have one eye on Week 14 when the playoffs begin. One key way to ensure we get the best shot at a ring is to think about matchups down the line.

Stash on the Colts

With Andrew Luck (kidney) out at least a month, owners holding Colts are likely in true panic mode. They should be, as 40-year-old Matt Hasselbeck will bog down the offense. But stashing guys like Luck, T.Y. Hilton or Donte Moncrief could prove very beneficial come playoff time. Assuming Luck is healthy by Week 14, he'll get to face the Jaguars, Texans and Dolphins in the fantasy playoffs. It's not going to get much softer than that. If you can afford to hold some Colts on your bench, acquiring them cheaply is an upside move.

Miller Lites all around

The firing of run-game-averse Joe Philbin and

ADAM LEVITAN

FANTASY SPORTS

Adam Levitan is a Fantasy Sports columnist for Metro. He also hosts The Daily Fantasy Edge podcast. @AdamLevitan installation of hard-nosed Dan Campbell as interim coach has done wonders for Lamar Miller. He's suddenly a focal point of the offense and the primary red zone option. However, Miller has to face the rugged defenses of the Eagles and Jets in two of the next three weeks. After that, though, he gets the Giants, Chargers and Colts in Weeks 14-16. Waiting for a down game and then pouncing on Miller for the playoffs should lead to profit.

Julio down by the Panther yard

Julio Jones is arguably the best player in fantasy football and a big reason many first-place teams are where they are. Even thinking about trading him away — even for a king's ransom — makes me queasy. But so does the idea of facing Josh Norman and the Panthers in Weeks 14 and 16. Quarterbacks have a passer rating of 30.5 when throwing at Norman this year, worst in the entire NFL (via PFF). He will be shadowing Julio when they face each other.

NFL matchups

DeSean Jackson vs. NO — It's time to erupt against arguably the league's worst pass defense.

Kamar Aiken vs. JAX — Aiken is the new No. 1 WR with Steve Smith done.

Brandon LaFell at NYG — Has come screaming off the injury list with at least seven targets in all three games.
